Innovation

MAHE Innovation Day was organized on 28th October 2017. Six innovative ideas from college were presented. Out of those, Mr. Vinish V & Dr. Shashidhara Y N from the Dept. of Community Health Nursing got the consolation prize for their innovative model on "Start Helmet". The helmet will play a key role in starting the vehicle. To achieve that, the helmet should act as the key for the vehicle to get the start. The helmet can be connected to Vehicle via RFID and it will work only when the helmet is worn by the rider. By adopting this simple technique the riders are automatically forced to use helmets even though they don't wish to use.

Dr. Simi Jesto Joseph, DNP, APN, NP-C
Director of Research & Clinical Services/ GI Nurse Practitioner

Harvard Clinical Research Scholar
SGNA Research Scholar (current)

At age 17, my parents decided to send me to MCON to start a new journey in the profession of nursing. I was in the fourth batch of the bachelor program, joined in 1994 and graduated in 1999. MCON has innumerable opportunities for students' professional growth in the field of nursing as well as the resources that are available here cannot be compared to any other institution in India. When I reflect on my four and a half years of training, the experience not only made me a better nurse but also prepared me in unpredictable ways for my career. I was fortunate enough to immigrate to the United States and continue my education there. I completed my Masters in Nursing/Nurse Practitioner in 2008, Doctorate in Nursing Practice in 2014, and graduated from the Harvard Medical School Clinical Research Scholars program in 2017. Currently, I am a Nurse Clinician, continuing education speaker, mentor for NP and PA students, an adjunct faculty at the Benedictine University, Department of Nursing and Health. I was honored by the Indian Nurses Association of Illinois and the American Nurses Association. I received the most prestigious National Nurse Practitioner award in 2016, “NP excellence in Clinical Practice” by the American Association of Nurse Practitioners. I truly value the undergraduate education I received from Manipal because that is what gave me the determination to aspire to be a nurse leader.
